About Me

My name is Caleb Carbon, and I am a self-taught web developer. Starting from scratch has been a journey, but my self-driven nature and ability to learn make me feel very suited for it. Working in this field is an opportunity to grow. I am committed to developing my skills, and eager to gain more experience as a professional. I bring enthusiasm and dedication to any team, maybe even your team soon!

Projects

My Homepage — Link

A personal homepage to showcase my project portfolio and responsive web design skills. Like a resume, but much more colorful.

Canal Street Clone — Link

This project is a visually accurate copy of the Canal Street Market website. I made it to demonstrate the ability to manipulate elements in the DOM to match a given design.

Yearwise, A React! Calendar App — Link

Yearwise uses React! components to map out each year, month, and day within 12 months of the present. Each has a taskbar to keep track of goals within its time frame, while days also have a schedule for timed events. It includes a mix of class and functional components to show I can use both.

Single Function Tic-Tac-Toe — Link

SFTTT, for short, is a function that can insert a Tic-Tac-Toe game into any webpage. It uses no CSS or external files, just one Javascript function. Playable against another person, or the Computer Opponent.
